

Leadership Vancouver Our Story

Our future depends upon the quality and qualities of our leaders. Everyone is a leader, even if we just lead our own lives. We all make choices. The question is whether we make choices that simply serve our own interests or whether we serve our interests by looking for ways to serve the interests of others. Good leadership demonstrates that we can be more successful by caring about and serving the interests of others.

Good leaders create community by creating environments where people are valued, where people care for one another, and where people pursue their personal interests by serving the interests of others and the common interests of the community.

Good leaders promote the idea of good leadership. It works for them and it works for all of us. Good leadership is promoting the value of good leadership, and the ideas and practices that lead to and create good leadership.

Our brand is what we become known for. We like to become known for our leadership.

The people who know us best are the people we serve. They have a relationship with us. They have a voice about their relationship. They have relationships with others.

Our interest is to make Vancouver known for its leadership in creating community, in creating community enterprises that work, and in creating new ways of doing things.

Our interest is to assist our leaders in becoming more successful and to engage them in pursuing our common interest of becoming a leadership community in creating community.

Our interest is to explore ideas, practices and models of enterprises that demonstrate good leadership.

Our interest is in creating ideas and enterprises that serve our common interests. Our interest is in creating ideas that help community enterprises become more successful. Our interest is in helping community enterprises create more successful enterprise around their ideas.

Our interest is to have community leaders tell stories of how we can significantly change things with good leadership practices and demonstrate the value of good leadership practices to ourselves, to the contributions we make to the interests of others and to the common interests of our community.

Our interest is to become an incubator for the discussion of leadership practices that work.

Our interest is in attracting more people to the idea of exercising personal leadership, the idea of taking personal responsibility for the interests of others.

Our interest is to attract and inspire more interest in leadership and good leadership practices.

Our future depends on how well we accelerate the rate at which we change things. Taking personal leadership and encouraging others to take personal leadership is a highly leveraged and efficient way to accelerate our rate of change.

Good leaders demonstrate that we can change things by changing how we do things. Good leaders demonstrate that we can change things by creating leadership models that inspire others to aspire to.

Our interest is to create a model that that inspires other leadership organizations with similar interests are inspired to aspire to.
